

STÉPHANE ROCHER

Loire Valley, France

Stéphane Rocher was a marketing and advertising executive in Paris for many years. In 2008 he completed a winemaking course in Montreuil and in 2011 Stéphane decided to leave the city and buy and renovate a farm in Anjou where he grew up. The property he purchased included a winery and a house set on 2 hectares of rolling hills. While he renovated his property, Stéphane worked as a caviste in Anjou. Over time he purchased additional hectares of vines and at this point began to focus completely on his own vineyards and making his own wine. Today Stéphane owns 25 hectares of land split between vines, forested areas, vegetable gardens and rolling fields. His vines stretch over 6.5 hectares of land. Stéphane's vision is all about championing the ecosystem and biodiversity of his property and he follows biodynamic principles. Stéphane's vines are certified organic by Agriculture Biologique.
